About the product

What is a wheel hub?

A wheel hub with a bearing is a component that connects the wheel to the car. Thanks to the inclusion of a bearing, the wheel hub enables the rotational movement of the wheel attached to it using bolts or studs. Without a wheel hub, the vehicle would not be able to move. Currently, the majority of cars have wheel hub units with bearings. The latest and most advanced wheel hubs have integrated wheel bearings and incorporate an ABS sensor.

There are currently three generations of bearings available on the market:

The first generation are compact replaceable bearings comprised of two “bearing components” enclosed in one housing.

The second generation consists of modules including a bearing and a wheel hub, and since disassembly is not possible, they must be replaced as a whole.

The third generation consists of complete modules, such as a bearing, hub, and flange for mounting the brake disc, wheels, and steering knuckle. They are also often equipped with rotational speed sensors, aiding the operation of the ABS and ESP systems.

The SKV hubs are characterized by high durability and exceptional longevity - these are the reasons why they are appreciated by car mechanics. By purchasing an SKV hub, one can be assured of receiving an exceptionally high-quality product.
